Public Cloud & Virtualization

Under the "cloud" concept, apps and data reside on a virtual network instead of individual computers. Leveraging SalesForce.com, Dropbox, Amazon Cloud, Google or similar Software-as-a-Service apps? As a shared, public service, these solutions support standardized office apps, unpredictable workloads, and high level of scalability in situations where low cost is also a critical factor.

A public cloud implementation is ideal for organizations with unpredictable and fluctuating workloads:

- Pay as you go
- Self-service provisioning
- On-demand scalability
- No upfront infrastructure investment
- Relief from ongoing management burdens

In a public cloud arrangement, applications and data are delivered as a service and managed by the provider. Users can access the cloud anywhere, anytime, and from any device.

DataLink will help you identify the public cloud offering that's right for your business, coordinate service set up for you, and manage the service provider relationship:

- Review service provider capabilities
- Identify service provider core strengths and challenges
- Compare service pricing among providers
- Confirm service provider references
- Recommend service providers to choose from
